

THE DAILY NEWS
The Official Organ of the City.

THURSDAY MARCH 23, 1876.

JOHN D. CAMERON, Editor

THE RALEIGH NEWS.

PUBLISHED IN THE NEWS BUILDING,

No. 5, Martin Street.

TERMS:

ADVERTISING RATES.—Per square (one line, Nonpareil) first inserted $1.00, each subsequent insertion 50 cents. No advertisement inserted for less than $1.00. Contracts for advertisements of any space or time can be made at the NEWS counting-room.

CONTRACTORS will positively not be allowed to exceed their space, or advertise other than their legitimate business, except by paying specially for the same.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.—Daily, one year, $6.00; six months, $3.00; three months, $2.00. Weekly, one year, $1.00; six months, 75 cents. Invariably in advance.

THE DAILY NEWS is the largest daily newspaper in the State—the only paper that receives the Telegraphic Reports, and the leading advertising medium in North Carolina.

THE WEEKLY NEWS is the cheapest paper published in North Carolina. It contains 40 columns of plain printed news from every section of the country, and is edited with special reference to the farmer and industrial classes of the country.

CIRCULATION.

THE DAILY NEWS has the largest daily circulation in the State, and over double the circulation of any other daily in Raleigh.

THE combined circulation of the Daily and Weekly News is nearly 5,000, and reaches more readers than any other paper in North Carolina.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot, under any circumstances, return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

THE METHODISTS.

While the Methodists in this city are centralizing the Methodists in Boston are on the hunt for relics. They recently petitioned the Mayor for enough of the old elm tree on the Common to make a pulpit chair or altar table, and their reason was that Jesse Lee, the founder of New England Methodism, preached his first sermon beneath that old tree July 11, 1790.

HOLD THEM TO THE ISSUE.

In the investigations which are being made in regard to the frauds, peculations and corruptions practised by the radical officials it must strike the impartial observer as somewhat extraordinary that as soon as a disclosure is made, it matters not however startling be its character, instead of pursuing the criminal to conviction, there is an immediate effort on the part of the Republican press to change the issue by attacking the character of the witnesses and casting suspicion around the tribunal conducting the investigation. Notably, has this been the case in regard to the bribe-taker Belknap, and so successfully pursued that the enquiry has actually been made, "Who is on trial?" Whether Clymer and other members of the committee who have unearthened this Bonanza of crime, or the defendant? And other cases of a like nature will naturally suggest themselves. It is the old cry of stop thief by the thief himself. And those who raise this cry to aid the guilty to escape the deep indignation which every honest man should feel at the burning shame brought upon his government at home and abroad, should receive the execration justly meted by the principal offenders.

THE PRICE OF GAS.

The New York Herald believes that if legislatures were under the will of the people and not subject to the control of fat-pursed lobbyists all gas difficulties could be regulated and the price of gas could be fixed by statute to run in accordance with the price of coal. The Herald continues that in France it is provided by law that when the price of flour is at a certain figure the price of gas will be at another certain figure, the relation between the two being definite and always the same, the one going up or down with the other. Allowance is made to give the baker a fair profit and to prevent extortion. This is done in a case where competition can operate. How much more occasion is there for this application of authority where, as in the case of a gas company, competition cannot come in to limit robbery! It can always be maintained what price the company pay for coal, and taking that figure as a basis of calculation, the price of gas could be fixed at such a point beyond as would allow fairly for all other expenses and a proper profit. Such a law would protect the people; and such a law cannot be secured in this State, with the people on one side and the gas companies on the other. Neither such a law nor a law for the proper regulation of street cars will ever be passed in Albany until twenty members of the Legislature have been sent to the State Prison for taking bribes.

RELIGIOUS MANIA.

The New York papers charge Moody and Sankey that they have produced a religious mania in the country that threatens to fill the mad houses before even the dog days set in. The New York police are actively engaged each day arresting the shouters on the street and cooling them off in the hospitals and station houses. It is doubtful which is the worst for the country, a religious or a political mania.

There is a class of persons in all communities who are born for frenzy whether to come lapsing from church with the devil behind them or to go rushing to political gatherings with the devil in front. Their ears are ever open for sensation and noise and while the church may pray for them it is very certain the average politician could not possibly live without them. He could as soon do without his liquor. It is their howls on the campus that tells him his effort is being felt and his voice climbs higher and still higher till he works them to such pitch they hurl their hats on the ground and leap upon them, and in all probability knock the same man down that refuses to do likewise.

Moody and Sankey have never visited North Carolina and there has ever been quite a wholesale supply of religious and political mania in market. There was a runaway on these streets only the other day in the case of a negro girl who was shouting and attempting to lug every one she met. No, let Moody and Sankey continue their good work. The testimony of all who have heard them is they are good men, and it is no fault of theirs that a portion of this world is as crazy as those that are tied up in straight jackets.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

The first water works in Texas are being established at Austin.

A man at Northampton, Pa., will shortly ship 75,000 school slates to Japan.

Women are now employed almost exclusively in the Italian telegraph offices.

Scranton had a haunted piano until the top was raised and a rat crawled out to jump out.

The proverb says: "Laugh and grow fat." What a saving of corn it would be if pigs could laugh.

The Paris newspapers are advocating the holding of another International Exposition in that city in 1878.

Mr. Fernando Wood is considered out of danger. An operation was performed on his throat on Saturday—Philadelphia Times.

The Boston Herald to the Christian Register: "We print a newspaper. We are not responsible for the sin of the world any more than the street lights are. The brother may set more evil in lighted streets than in dark ones, but he walks the safer."

It is stated from Washington that experienced members of Congress who have been discussing the question of the adjournment of the body are in a like case, according to the present appearance, how the adjournment can take place before the Fourth of July.

I will not do in three days to nominate for the Presidency any man who has come with me even in the dark shadow of misgovernment which we never had in sight.

No politician it is to day out-and-out. A tried reformer is the only safe leader.—New York Post.

The funeral of Mrs. Carl Schurz took place on Saturday afternoon from her late residence in New York. The services were very simple and unostentatious, consisting merely of the singing of two dirges and a brief address by Rev. Dr. O. P. Frothingham. Those who were present were the near friends and relatives of the family, a brother, a son, and several nieces.

Mr. Amos J. Cummings, formerly editor of the Tribune, and then of the New York Daily News, is to be the author of the new literary paper which is to be made out of the Evening Express. Cummings is a brilliant newsman. He first gave the dash and snap to the Sun. He is in poor health, however, and his friends think he is about entering upon the performance of too big a contract.—Philadelphia Times.

On. H. H. Dana Jr., has written a letter to Senator Boutwell on the subject of his nomination as Minister to England. He says he does not wish the nomination withdrawn, but there is nothing in the gift of the Government which would induce him to go to Washington and submit a question touching his honor to the Senate which has been taken by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

Rents in New York. A New York letter to the Philadelphia Ledger says: "A prominent real estate dealer who does a large business in renting down town stores and counting rooms, was asked this morning how store rents were likely to be by May 1st. His reply is worth recording. 'Rents are rising with no sort of regularity. There are no fixed prices. If present occupants are anxious of staying on for another year, provided they have lower rents, the concession is at once made to them, and in these cases the reduction may be said to run all along from 15 to 20 per cent. There are a great many stores let for the first time, Canal and Maiden Lane, and people who can furnish satisfactory guarantees that they will pay their rents when it is due, can have them on almost their own terms.'

[New York Herald. March Returns Home.]

Late yesterday afternoon information reached the Herald office that Caleb P. Marsh, who resides in New York in the course of the evening. At eight o'clock a reporter called at Mr. Marsh's residence, No. 40 West Fifty-seventh street, and asked to see him. The servant said, "Mr. Marsh, the owner of the house, is not here."

The reporter asked, "Who is in?" "There is nobody here," the servant said, "but Mr. William Marsh, who has produced a religious mania in the country, has threatened to fill the mad houses before even the dog days set in." The New York police are actively engaged each day arresting the shouters on the street and cooling them off in the hospitals and station houses. It is doubtful which is the worst for the country, a religious or a political mania.

There is a class of persons in all communities who are born for frenzy, about fifty years of age, somewhat above the median height, of slight build, over-dressed and wearing a gray mustache. The servant replied, "Mr. Marsh's son."

The reporter asked to see him, and in a few moments a gentleman about fifty years of age, somewhat above the median height, of slight build, over-dressed and wearing a gray mustache, appeared.

In reply to the reporter's inquiries the gentleman, after a moment's reflection, answered:

"I will say nothing at all. I prefer to put it in that way."

As the reporter turned to leave the gentleman shook his head significantly, and with a smile added my son:

"Somebody will know something about it."

Thus enlightened (?) the reporter bade the gentleman good night and left the house at once. A moment after a carriage drove up and the gentleman with whom the reporter had been conversing entered it and was driven rapidly down Fifth Avenue.

It was subsequently ascertained that Mr. Caleb P. Marsh has no son living with him there, and certainly not of the age of the gentleman who was represented to be William Marsh. The description of Caleb P. Marsh, given by a person quite familiar with his appearance, corresponded exactly with that of the Mr. Marsh who was speaking to the Herald reporter.

It was reported that Marsh intended to return to Montreal last night, but the usual eleven o'clock Montreal night express train does not go beyond Troy on Saturdays. The air of mystery governing the movements of the person pretending to be Marsh's son, but who is, beyond doubt, Mr. Marsh himself, shows clearly that the fugitive witness is in tow, and remains a secret to the public from the United States government. The servant girl who was questioned at the house, after the carriage had gone away, though evidently fully instructed as to the necessity for silence on her part, inadvertently made the admission that "Mr. Marsh" had just gone out. When asked if the person who pretended the carriage was really Mr. Marsh, she replied, "Oh, yes, his son; you're right," and she immediately added, "He won't be back to-night."

The watchman who does night duty in the neighborhood and has charge of the March mansion contradicted the story that Mr. Marsh had a son, and his description of the fugitive witness exactly tallied with that of the man seen in the house about a week ago in the carriage.

There is, however, very little doubt but that Caleb P. Marsh is again in New York, and in a few days somebody will know something."

AGRICULTURAL.

Farmer's Gardens.

The best way to lay out a garden is to have it long and narrow, with space enough at the ends to turn a team handily. Length is important if you want to have the cultivation all done by horse-power. It can be done far better by horse than by hand-power. The length should lay from north to south, so as to enable the sun to reach both sides of the rows.

Now the garden land twelve inches deep if possible; then harrow fine as flour, and plant at once, laying out the rows three feet apart. The garden spot must be kept entirely clean of trash, bushes, stones, or anything that would not grow in the plow and cultivator row. There is not a more brilliant prospect of fine garden without manure. But a good substance may be improvised in this way. Prepare a barrel on a platform as you would for an ash-hopper, fill it full of manure. Have a large tub under the edge of the platform to catch the liquid manure. Pour into the barrel the slops from the chamber and commodes of the premises, as well as the soap-suds from the wash-tubs, and the refuse of the kitchen. In this way, you have forty quarts of liquid manure every day from one barrel of manure. If the liquid manure is strong, add water to it, and pour on your garden spot and vegetables in the afternoon, from half an hour to an hour before sunset, until dark. In this way you will be able to water your garden fully once a week, or one-sixth of it each day. When the ground is wet, do not apply the liquid manure.

After your ground has been well prepared to be planted in, stretch a line from one end to the other of the garden, and plant in rows three feet apart whatever you wish to raise. In ten days after, make another planting, and keep up every ten days until you have a good crop growing up a succession of vegetables. Let the ground go over with the cultivator before each planting, and the weeds destroyed, and everything put in the best condition for the seeds. By this time garden beds are done away with and everything is cultivated by horse-power. An hour or two will give the garden a thorough cultivation, and the ground can be worked deep, and thoroughly pulverized, and the vegetables kept in the best state of growth. Some horticulturists may be needed, but fully nine-tenths of that will be saved by this plan.

Why Franklin Used Simple Language.

Tradition has it that years ago, when Benjamin Franklin was a lad, he used to study physiology, and soon he was fond of applying technical names to various objects. One evening when he mentioned to his father that he had swallowed some accephalous mussels, the old man was much alarmed, and suddenly seizing him, cried loudly for help. Mrs. Franklin came with warm water, and the hired man came in with the garden pump. They had half a gallon down Benjamin's throat, then held him over the edge of the porch and poured water on him while the old man said "If I don't get them things out of Benny he will be plizened, sure." When they were out, and Benjamin explained that the articles he alluded to were oysters, his father fondled him for an hour with the straw tray for caring the family. After this Franklin's language was simple.
